Newcomer's Meeting

Don't forget that at each TERA ride there is a special meeting for "newbies". Presented by a member of the Board of Directors, this informative session is held on Friday evening. There should be signs posted giving the time and location. If not, be sure to ask the ride manager.

So, if you see someone wandering around looking lost when you get to a ride, send them to the Newcomer's Meeting! You might even want to come along yourself ... even, though (since you're reading this) you couldn't possibly be a newcomer yourself! You never know what you might learn!

Trail Etiquette: The Good, The Bad, and The Ugly

Donna L. Nicholson

The year of 2007 has become a time of hustle and bustle, time constraints, economic stressors, mean demeanors, road rage, non-sportsmanship like conduct, rude behaviors and many other stressors of unknown proportions. These are behaviors that most of us find distasteful and often shake our head thinking, "How could a human being act like that?" Now, I don't mean to say there are not wonderful individuals out there that make our plight in life most rewarding. My hat goes off to you that demonstrate good etiquette, but those of who don't bring me to write this article.

Before, I go over some of these unpleasant behaviors that have been graciously been brought to my attention, let's review some very basic endurance/ trail etiquette. I'm sure there are many more you could come up with, but these are a few:

1. When on trail and someone asks to pass, wait until it is safe for everyone, move to the side and allow the rider to pass.
2. Keep at least one horse length behind the horse in front of you. Do not run up on someone.
3. Honor all ribbons placed on horses tails: Red- kicking horse, Yellow- stallion, Green-New Rider
4. When a horse and rider are at a drinking spot, do not leave or pass without asking your fellow rider if you may do so.
5. If someone is off their horse, slow down and ask if you can be of assistance.
6. When camping, be mindful of your neighbors and their horses.
7. Do not gallop up on horses, especially if it is a new rider or young horse.
8. Be watchful of other riders and if they are having problems with their horse, try to help.

Now that we have addressed how we should act, I want to relate some examples that are rude and crude, and have been cited to me by other riders. If you see yourself in these descriptions, I would suggest some change and improvements. First, there are some riders that have become trail hogs. They (two or more) block the trail and will not allow other riders to pass, even after they have asked politely for the trail. What is that about? Does getting one or two placements ahead mean that much to you? Remember our motto, "To Finish is To Win."

What about the rider that who almost runs over you and your horse with no consideration for a first time rider or someone on an inexperienced horse? The horse is jumping all around making the horse difficult to control and making the rider nervous which already adds to the situation of a possible wreck.

Here it is 90+ degrees and you are at a ride and trying to get your horse to drink and a rider goes by, initiating the instinct to go with the herd and your horse won't drink again. Consequently you get pulled at the next vet check for metabolic reasons. Don't we all want to complete with our horses in good shape?

Another incident most recently told to me was that a crew and crew truck were parked at a turn and the approaching rider could not see the ribbons for the turn. Consequently, the rider went past the turn one mile before she realized she was not on correct trail. When she turned around and went back the crew and truck were still there and didn't offer to say a word! How rude can that be? Come to find out they weren't even riding the same distance!

What about your inconsiderate neighbor who runs their generator most of the day and most of the night? The generator is so loud you can hardly hear yourself think and your poor horse is stressed and cannot relax due to the noise. You may think "well the non generator person move somewhere else", but as fate would have it the generator was not running when you set up camp, and who wants to pull up camp and move? Yes, we all understand you paid good money for that generator, but cool your trailer down and turn it off, if you need that much power stay at home!

My impression is that we all passionate about this sport, our horses, and a lot of us use these weekends as a time to rejuvenate, spend time with friends, see beautiful trails, enjoy the quiet and most of all spend time with our beloved horses. Let's all try to enjoy our sport, and treat each other with respect, and leave all that other ugly behavior somewhere else.
